FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Senior Executive Changes at Casey Industrial, Inc.

WESTMINSTER, Colorado (August 1, 2011) – Casey Industrial announced that on August 1, 2011, Bart Wear has retired from his position as President and CEO of Casey Industrial. He has been succeeded by Stephen Brague, who most recently served as COO at Casey Industrial for the past six years. Mr. Wear will continue to provide strategic guidance and remain on the board of directors.

Mr. Brague joined Casey Industrial in 2005 after fifteen years of operations and capital projects work with building product manufacturers in both national and international locations. In making this announcement, the Casey Industrial board of directors stated, “Steve has worked zealously and collaboratively with our employees, suppliers, and clients to implement structural and process enhancements to consistently improve our project delivery services. He has been instrumental in broadening the company’s operational depth and breadth without compromising our commitment to safety, quality cost-effectiveness, and fairness. As only the company’s fourth President, we are confident in his leadership skills for years to come.”

Headquartered in Westminster, Colorado, Casey Industrial is a multi-craft specialty industrial contractor who operates nationally in the forest products, power, and industrial processes markets. Founded in 1947, Casey Industrial has been providing award-winning services for 64 years. To learn more, please visit www.caseyind.com.
